SUCCESSFUL MEETING HERE

The convention of the Rocky Mountain Branch of the Canadian Mining Institute which was to have taken place at Corbin on June 30th was held in Coleman instead, the change being made necessary because of several washouts on the road going in to Corbin.

The convention assembled in the council chamber here, and was presided over by President O. E. S. Whiteside. Some excellent papers on subjects of special interest to the members of the Institute were read, and a paper was also presented by Henry James on mine rescue work.

These papers, as well as other business matters, kept the convention rather busy during the afternoon, and all the members remained over for the sports and other competitions on Dominion Day.

KILLED AT HILLCREST

Hillcrest, July 6.—Ernesto Zagiaglioni, an Italian about 24 years of age, was killed in the mine here last night by a fall of coal or cap rock.

He was unmarried. Funeral Friday afternoon.

Miners Pass Examinations

Messrs. P. M. Sherwin, of Frank, and G. W. B. Deniell, of Coleman, have successfully passed the Mine Surveyor's Examinations. The successful candidates in the Third Class Examinations were D. C. Robert and Robert Holmes, of Coleman; D. Lamond, of Frank; and G. J. McKean and Robert Brown, of Bellevue. Congratulations.

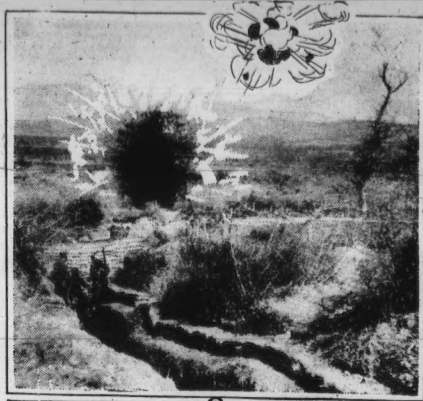

LOCAL AND GENERAL

The appointment of W. A. Beebe, of Blaimore, as an notary public has been gazetted. C. F. Sedgewick, of Lundbreck, is also appointed a commissioner for taking affidavits, and I. L. Dutil, of Blaimore, a game guardian.

Some children up on the hill have been running around with nothing on in the way of wearing apparel but an expansive smile. It may be comfortable for the children, but it is decidedly uncomfortable for the young man who takes his young lady friend for a stroll in that neighborhood.

Dr. Darwin, of Regina, Superintendent of Methodist Missions in Saskatchewan and President of the Saskatchewan Conference, accompanied by Mrs. Darwin, are spending their vacation at Star Creek, the guests of their daughter, Mrs. Leonard Norman.

Corp. Arthur Graham, who has been in the Old Country for several months, has succeeded in passing his final examinations in the signal service, being one out of three in his company who obtained 100 per cent.

EYE WITNESS' STORY OF THE GREATEST OF NAVAL BATTLES

Vivid Description of the Great Sea Fight off Jutland in Which the Huns Were Chased Home--Our Story Was Compiled by an Officer of the Flag Ship and Has Never Previously Appeared in Print--A Red-Blooded Chronicle of Events as They Actually Happened.

(The following graphic story of the greatest of all naval battles was written by Staff Paymaster Foot--brother of R. G. Foot, of Coleman--who also holds the position of Secretary to the Admiral of the First Battle Cruiser Squadron, and was compiled from notes made by Officer Foot during the progress of the battle. This story was included in the Admiral's report to the Government. Through the courtesy of our fellow townsman, The Bulletin is enabled to give its readers this remarkable narrative before it has ever appeared in print elsewhere.)

Long before any of you get this letter you will have read highly coloured accounts of the battle of Jutland, which it seems probable the action of 31st May will be called.

On getting back after two or three days of big events it was necessary, owing to the censorship, to sit down to the extraordinary task of trying to write an ordinary letter of news detailing events infinitely remote and insignificant of pre-action times. Then when the Admiralty published the preliminary statement it seemed advisable to wire home that all was well as the letter would take two or three days en route.

Now, however, that one is free to write on the subject, there is still the censorship difficulty to be surmounted, and it will have to be a carefully chosen route that can hold your interest without disclosing information that may not be disclosed.

As you will get the impersonal reports of many reporters who were not there, perhaps a narrative confined strictly to personal experiences will best answer the purpose, and if the "Ts" occur very frequently you will understand that it is unavoidable.

We have put to sea in our unexpected way and were heading in the not unusual direction for the "other side." Things were if anything more peaceful than usual; the weather was fine and the sea calm, and I was spending a quiet afternoon in my cabin much entertained with Ian Hay's latest novel "A Knight on Wheels." Under these conditions it was a complete surprise when the cheery red-faced signal boatswain popped his head through the curtain, murmured "B.J." and disappeared to commit similar disturbing acts in other places. Now, "B.J." is the culminating phase of readiness for action and as a rule is worked up to by easy stages. On this occasion readiness for immediate action was ordered.

With pencil, notebook, and binoculars I ascended to the fore upper bridge, from which lofty position (about 70 feet above the water line) I am supposed to record my impressions. Everyone was expectant as reports then beginning to come in indicated that our battle cruisers were in touch with the enemy and not very far off.

The fore bridge, while not actually in action, is quite a populous place with about 25 to 30 officers and men, and conditions since the beginning of the war have led to the adoption of various rigs, so that to the outsider the impression would be picturesque rather than impressive.

Nothing happened until 5.40 p.m. when we heard heavy firing on the starboard bow and ten minutes later we could see the great flashes of our battle cruisers firing. At the long ranges at which actions take place with modern guns the limits of visibility form one of the greatest difficulties, and what would appear an ordinarily clear day may quite possibly leave the enemy out of sight although well within gun range. This was one of our main difficulties through the day and it enabled the enemy to escape when otherwise there would have been no ending but the annihilation of his fleet.

Although, therefore, we were actually within range of the enemy for some time from 6 p.m. onwards the ships formed too vague a target to enable us to fire when they were sighted momentarily through the horizon mist. The battle cruisers meanwhile being nearer were able to keep up an intermittent fire with what results, however, we were unable to judge.

From 6 p.m. onwards until we opened fire our own particular situation grew steadily hotter. Stray projectiles coming from anywhere ricocheted near and over with their tremendous roaring and puffing sound, but by this time of course one's sense of proportion had become more or less tuned up to big things, and I fancy there is a decided limit beyond which one's faculties refuse to take in or estimate any more in the shape of big sounds, scenes, and sensations. Thus, when at about 6.15 one of our ships blew up with a terrific explosion away on our starboard quarter, it was as far as I was concerned, a fact to be recorded. In this case, however, there was certainly a deliberate act of repression and an effort to carry out what was my duty, namely, to record as much as possible of the cataclysmic incidents.

As we were beginning to become involved in the battle the admiral and captain, etc., retired to the conning tower which is their heavily protected action station. The captain of marines, a midshipman, were then the only other officers left on the bridge and their duty with about ten men was to control the secondary armament.

About 6.30 p.m. we opened fire with deliberate salvos. The concussion of 5 twelve-inch guns going off absolutely together is, as you may imagine, pretty considerable. Even on the bridge it is difficult to keep ones cap on, and after each discharge the whole ship is enveloped for a moment in a dense brown fog.

At first we fired at the dim enemy battle line, but presently shifted to a cruiser which was nearer (about 7 miles away) and which shortly became a target for many of our ships, being the only vessel clearly discernible. This was one of the enemy losses we definitely know.

For a time there was a lull as the mist had eclipsed all enemy vessels, and we were therefore able to see one of our disabled destroyers, which we passed quite close. She had been struck by at least two large projectiles which had practically gone through her as if she had not been in the way, and when we passed she thought she was sinking. Nevertheless they were working like Trojans on board and cheered us with great vigour. We were very pleased to hear two days afterwards that she had been towed safely back. Of course there was never any question of our stopping to render assistance. A big ship never stops under any considerations whatever, as movement is her one defence against submarines which as you may imagine were pretty thick in those unhealthy waters.

About 7 o'clock another enemy cruiser hove in sight and at once became a general target with

JULY FIRST WAS A BIG SUCCESS

The Dominion Day celebration in Coleman proved to be a great success from every point of view, and as a result quite a handsome sum will be handed over to the Red Cross Society as soon as the bills have been paid.

A conservative estimate places the number of people who spent the day in Coleman at 5,000. The weather was good, and there was nothing to mar the pleasure of the day, unless it was the inability of the sports committee to secure entries for the items on the program.

The first aid and mine rescue competitions occupied the greater portion of the day and evoked considerable interest on the large crowd present. An improvised mine was erected and the competitions took place under conditions as near as possible to those which obtain in a mine.

Coleman teams got away with their share of the prizes offered, winning all the first aid events. The results are as follows:

MINE RESCUE

- 1st--Coal Creek No. 1. (Silver shield and gold medals).
- 2nd--Lethbridge No. 6. (Gold medals given by District 18).
- 3rd--Lethbridge No. 3. (Silver medals).

FIRST AID

- 1st--International No. 1. (Silver shield and gold medals).
- 2nd--Carbondale (McGillivray). (Gold medals given by District 18).
- 3rd--International No. 2. (Silver medals).

The following men comprised the different local teams which won the above trophies:

International No. 1.—D. Davis, Capt.; R. Morgan, R. Greenhaugh, J. Glendenning and G. S. Greenhaugh.

Carbondale (McGillivray mine)—Wm. Chapman, Capt.; Geo. Hoggan, Alex. Scott, Isaac James and Thos. Haines.

International No. 2.—Jos. Kalphka, Capt.; Steve Leosci, Jos. Kubinec, Geo. Bruneau and Jos. Russia.

The judges for the first aid and mine rescue competitions were: Dr. Ross, Albert Johnston, Dr. Olivier, Miss Dempster, Wm. White and R. Naimith.

Mr. John Stirling, of the Coal Mines Branch of the Department of Public Works, spent the day in Coleman, as did also some forty members of the Rocky Mountain Branch of the Canadian Mining Institute. Ex President Wilson of the Mining Institute, of Fernie, was also a visitor during the day.

To the ladies of the Red Cross Society is due the credit for making the day a success financially. Just at the moment it is not possible to say what amount will be available after expenses have been paid, but it will be a substantial sum. The only source of revenue was from the sale of badges, and for lunch at the Red Cross booth, and the ladies had full charge of both these enterprises. How faithfully they did their work will be shown when the final financial statement is printed a little later on.

Messrs. E. J. Hill and W. J. Armstrong, of Lethbridge, motored through Coleman Thursday morning en route to Cranbrook.

Does the Kaiser Reluct?

Sometimes in reviewing the career of the Kaiser it is more charitable, as well as, perhaps, more just, to believe him the victim of a monomania. An inordinate vanity is often a form of dementia, and the man who has allowed the horrible illusion of his own infallibility to overpower him becomes a lunatic, nursing dreams of limitless greatness. Yet, perhaps even on occasions when his subjects are celebrating his birthday there may come moments when the German emperor himself starts back horrified at what he has done. It is difficult to imagine with what thoughts he reflects on the history of the last eight years, when he becomes aware in his heart of hearts—as he must do at times—that he is the author of the most hideous calamity which has ever befallen the sons of men.—London Telegraph.

Establish Farmers' Banks

United States to Open Banks For the Benefit of Farmers

The Hollis farm loan bill embodying the system of rural credits designed by the Wilson administration passed the United States senate by a large majority a few days ago.

By this bill a system of twelve or more land banks in as many different parts of the union is established. Each bank has control of the loans in that district and these banks themselves are under control of a farm loan board of five members, presidential. The secretary of the United States treasury must be one member of the board of five.

Each land bank will have a capital stock of at least $300,000. This stock is to be offered to the public and if not subscribed for in a definite time will be subscribed by the United States government. The capital thus furnished will be supplied to farmers through co-operative farm loan associations made up of ten or more farmers. The local association would obtain its charter through the land bank of its district.

Desiring farmers desirous of borrowing would take stock in the farm loan association and 5 per cent. of his loan. This association then would take an equal amount of stock in the land bank, which would in turn secure the security offered by the association which in turn looks after the farmers' security. On mortgage of the land to $500,000 a bank might issue a like amount of farm loan bonds which would be secured by all twelve land banks.

This scheme is somewhat like the scheme of federal banks now in existence in the United States. The great difference is that the system of federal banks is a superimposed one, linking up a system of banks already thoroughly established. The farm loan system, however, has the groundwork to create.

A somewhat similar bill has been reported by the banking committee of the house of representatives in the United States, and will be brought up soon for consideration there. It is much the same in its prospective results, though somewhat different in its mode of operation.

Shortage of News Print

The shortage of news print seems to be universal. The commission elected by the French press to study the means whereby the present paper crisis might best be overcome recently, when it was announced that the Journal, the Matin, the Petit Parisien and the Gaulois, four leading papers each of which has a circulation of more than a million copies, had to reduce their circulation four pages on five days of the week and six on the other two days.

Better Than "Whispering Gallery"

Approved by the speaker in the British Parliament the extensive ventilation chamber which passes beneath the House of Commons was recently mentioned as a place where a large number of persons can comfortably hear every word spoken in the chamber above. The tunnel was crowded to its fullest capacity, and that was on the historic occasion of Mr. Gladstone's speech when the first Boer War bill was introduced.

Why is a watch like a river? Because it doesn't run long without winding.

Shoe on the Other Foot

Germany has complained bitterly of the attempt of England to starve out her civil population in order to bring the war to a close. This suggests a very pertinent question. Suppose that Germany, instead of Great Britain, had had command of the sea at the very beginning of the war. It has been stated many times that the home supply of Great Britain would not last over six weeks if her imports of food stuffs were stopped. Is there anybody so silly as to believe that Germany, in case she had had command of the sea, would not have cut off Great Britain's supply of food instantly and entirely and brought her to her knees by starvation within two months after the institution of such a blockade?

It must be remembered, also, as to Germany's complaint that the allies are trying to starve the civilian non-combatant population, that every bushel of American wheat going to Germany relieves a bushel of German wheat to feed the army. Any importation of foodstuffs into Germany for the relief of the civilian population is a direct way of supporting the German army.—From the New York Outlook.

The man getting his hair cut noticed that the barber's dog, which was lying on the floor beside the chair, had his eyes fixed on his nape at work.

"Nice dog, that," said the customer.

"He is, sir,"

"It ain't that, sir," explained the barber. "You see, sometimes I make a mistake and clip off a little bit of a customer's ear."

STINGING NEURALGIA

The Trouble Due to Nerves Starved for Lack of Good Blood

An eminent medical writer has said that "neuralgia is the cry of starved nerves for better blood." The one great symptom of this trouble is pain, fierce, stabbing, pain that almost drives the sufferer frantic. The one cause is poor blood; the only cure is to enrich the blood. Host applied to the inflamed nerves will give relief, but does not cure. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills furnish the blood all the needed elements, and the blood conveys them to the nerves. The only way of getting food or medicine to the nerves is through the blood and the only way to enrich the blood is through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

In this way neuralgia, sciatica and other nerve disorders are promptly cured, and the whole system is benefited and strengthened. Mrs. M. Gleason, R. R. No. 1, Windsor, Ont., who was a great sufferer from neuralgia, says: "I suffered intensely from neuralgia for four years. I tried this and that, but it was completely run down. I suffered intense pain all the time. At different times I consulted different doctors, but they could not give me any relief. Then I tried different medicines, but the result was the same—they could not cure me. I was growing steadily worse, and finally could not leave the house to do a bit of work. The last doctor I consulted could do nothing for me but give me morphine tablets to ease the pain, and by this time I had about resigned myself to a life of pain. Then one of Dr. Williams' almshouses came to our house and I read of similar cases cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I bought three boxes and before they were all gone the pain began to decrease, and I began to have a better appetite. By the time I had taken six boxes I was again a well woman, and my neighbors could hardly realize that such a change could be made in so short a time. Later I was bothered with eczema and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured that, too. I have found that the Pills worth their weight in gold and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are ailing."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

New Icebreaker for Russia

Will Aid in Keeping Open Russia's Winter Port

Canada has sold her new giant icebreaker, launched recently from the yards of the Canadian Vickers Limited, Montreal, to the Russian government.

The vessel will be completed during the coming fall and is hoped will be delivered in time to aid in the work of keeping open Russia's winter port of Archangel.

This is the third Canadian vessel of the same kind to be turned over by the government to the czar's empire. The last two years the Minto and the Earl Grey have been similarly disposed of and have been sent across the sea to aid the service of Russia. They have done effective work and in the expression of the Russian government's gratitude for the transfer of the vessels it was emphasized that they have been paid for their value many times over in the facilities they have afforded for the landing of cargoes of munitions.

Aviator Again Escapes

Eugene Gilbert, French Aviator, Reported to Have Escaped to Italy

Eugene Gilbert, one of the best known French aviators, who was interned in Switzerland in August last year on being consigned to land by lack of gasoline on Swiss soil after a raid on the Zeppelin establishment at Friedrichshafen, escaped for the third time. The Petit Parisien has information which has not been confirmed, namely, that M. Gilbert has reached Italy.

M. Gilbert, who established several world's records before the war, joined the French forces at the outbreak of the war. His first escape from the detention camp in Switzerland was made shortly after he was interned. He reached Paris, but was sent back on the demand of the Swiss government because he did not give the authorities sufficient notice that he had withdrawn his word of honor not to attempt to escape. In February last M. Gilbert made his second attempt to regain his liberty, but was recognized and was arrested at Olten, Switzerland.

Headache is not a disease in itself, but comes as a warning to tell you that there is something wrong with the system. Consequently when you stop a headache by the use of powerful narcotic drugs, you merely stifle the "danger signal" by which Nature tells you that there is trouble ahead.

A starved condition of the nervous system is by far the most frequent cause of headache. You may be going too fast a pace and burning the candle at both ends. The nervous system has no opportunity to renew its vigor, and the result is nervous headache, sleeplessness, indigestion and irritability.

Neuralgia quickly cured, is, twice, may, ten times cured. Little neuralgia pains grow into big ones, but Nerviline in ten minutes relieves even the worst ones. Even a single application will remove the nerve congestion that causes the pain.

A Nerviline penetrates deeply into the sore tissue, drives the source of inflammation, drives it out root and branch. Every drop of Nerviline is potent in pain-subduing power, and its strongest charm lies in the fact that it rubs right in, even to the very last drop. Nerviline is not greasy, and its pain-removing power is at least five times greater in strength than ordinary remedies.

A Comparison in Casualties

In less than two years Germany has lost in battle over five times as many soldiers as the Union lost in four years of the Civil War. Northern losses were 67,000 killed in battle and 43,000 who died of wounds, making a total of 110,000 killed. The German killed amount to 664,000. Since the Kaiser has only about three times as large a population to draw upon as had Abraham Lincoln, and as he is losing men in battle over ten times as fast, the ratio of Germany's daily loss to population is more than three times as great as was the loss of the Northern States. But Germany is not allowing so many men to die of disease as did the United States. Diseases took 190,000 Union soldiers, or upward of double as many as were taken by Confederate bullets.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Old Golroo—You wish to marry my only daughter. Would you take from me all I have to solace me in my old age?

Cheeky Sultano—Oh, no, sir, my daughter is too young to marry.

Cautious Wife—Dinna pay the fares yet, Angus. They may drop a bomb on us and then you'd have thrown good money away.

"Wish to marry my daughter," do you say? To my advice, don't.

"But the King says he knows you."

"Oh, well," responded Whistler, "you know he's always bragging."

"I have noticed evidence of insanity in her lately."

"Good heavens! What evidence?"

"She says she wants to marry you."

What is probably the highest price ever paid for lumber in this part of the country was put up by Pete Joy and another man who makes his home with Pete on Wednesday of this week. It happened this way: Pete and his pal removed some seven boards from the athletic grounds on Tuesday—lumber that T. W. Davis had used in building the Red Cross booth—without going through the formality of asking for it. So, having been caught in the act, he simply had to smile and take what was coming in the police court on Wednesday morning. He was assessed ten dollars and costs, and his friend got a similar dose, the two fines and costs amounted to over thirty dollars. What is some price for seven boards—even if they were made in Coleman.

The July issue of Red and Gun is replete with material of interest to the sportsman, whether he be fisherman, hunter, dog fancier, gun crank or what not. Bonnycastle Dale contributes the leading article "The Pursuit of the Maskingbird"; E. V. Williams gives a chapter in the adventurous life of a Seal Pup; Geo. H. Sarver relates an experience in which British Columbia sportsmen are attacked by grizzlies; Edward T. Martin describes a fight put up by a wild goose when attacked by a retriever. Other stories and articles, in addition to the regular departments are: Burns of Benwell, A Good Friday Visit to Jack Miner's Preserve near Kingsville; Yachting in Cape Breton; Fisheries of Clout's Bay, Port Arthur, etc. etc. The July issue is a good one to tuck into the outer's kit when setting forth on his vacation.

Crowded Out

Considerable Bellevue, Blairmore and Coleman news has been crowded out of this issue, but will appear next week.

BATTLE OF JUTLAND

much the same results as before.

On our port hand we were passing the wreck of a large ship which at that time we hoped was a German, but later learned was one of ours. She was broken right in two, and with the broken sections standing on the bottom the bow and stern were sticking up about 50 feet and quite independent. One of our destroyers was standing by and taking off the two survivors then in sight.

We were now treated to a destroyer attack from the mist ahead. There were apparently several destroyers engaged on this expedition but only one came really clearly into view.

There was no time to waste if we were to stop her firing her torpedo which she would probably do at about 3,000 yards. Several ships concentrated on her quickly however and there was no more destroyer. The "Colossus" claims to have fired the final salvo that finished her. Meanwhile events were developing on our beam for when we looked around there were at least three of the enemy capital ships comparatively close on our starboard beam (about 5½ miles off) having apparently suddenly come out of a bank of mist. The leading ship was a battle cruiser and we both concentrated on each other as speedily as possible. Things became very lively now, so much so that it was impossible to take in all that was actually happening. One of her 12 inch made a fine mess of our superstructure just abaft the foremost funnel and a huge blaze ensued. Almost at the same moment the fore part of the ship was plastered with splinters of a twelve inch shell that burst about 30 yards short of the ship. The range taker who was standing just beside me on the bridge had his right arm completely shattered and another man in the fore top was severely wounded. Apart from these casualties the damage to personnel was comparatively slight. After settling the poor wounded fellow on the deck I jumped down below for a stretcher party, but finding the fire a more urgent duty sent a messenger instead and bore a hand putting out the remains of the fire which was quickly under control.

By the time this occupation had ended and I had returned to the bridge the enemy vessels had sheered off into the mist and firing had ceased. We had given rather better than we had got, however, and at least four direct hits had been observed on the battle cruiser, while of course there were several other ships firing at her.

We could still see the flashes of the firing of our battle cruisers which were able to keep touch with the enemy for some time longer, but gradually we got out of touch more and more, the desire being apparently very strong on their side and much aided by the low visibility, and soon it was a case of cruising about trying to anticipate the enemy movements from the scant information obtainable. Either submarines or destroyers were, however, still in evidence as we shortly espied a wiley torpedo coming our way. An alteration of course enabled us to avoid this and peace reigned once more. It must not be supposed that this could be realised at once however. As a matter of fact it was not until after nine (we had then been more than six hours at our stations) that we ventured to turn our thoughts to the question of food. I then lightly volunteered to go down and arrange for something to be sent up to the bridge, but I found the undertaking was rather more than I had anticipated. All the galley fires were out, the major part of the living spaces below were in darkness and the decks were covered with filthy water. In one section of the ship the water had risen two or three feet owing to a fire main having been pierced by a shell splinter. I found the cook in the centre engine room where he formed one of the first aid party, and he soon got under weigh, made some boiling water and about twenty minutes later we had bœuf and biscuits on the bridge.

It was an anxious time. At various intervals fierce bursts of firing would break out where outlying squadrons of light cruisers and destroyers were screening the battle fleet, and it was an ideal night for destroyer attack.

About 10.30 p.m. I went down to my cabin and tried to get a short rest in my armchair, but it was hard to settle down, and with various alarms which brought the guns' crew immediately over my head dashing up to their positions I found it almost impossible to sleep. At twenty minutes to twelve a more than usually heavy outburst of firing right astern and lasting about ten minutes brought me up to the bridge at the run, but as it presently subsided I came down and slept more or less until 2 a.m. when we went to action stations again it being then practically light and there being always the possibility that dawn might disclose the enemy battle fleet.

I forgot to mention that at about 11.30 we felt we were passing over something and opinion is rife as to the possibilities of our having sunk a submarine.

Towards 3 a.m. heavy firing again broke out though nothing was in sight. Later we learned it was the battle cruisers firing at a zeppelin flying northward at a high altitude. We sighted the same airship some twenty minutes later and on one or two of our ships firing (range 9 to 10 miles) she turned away and disappeared.

During the morning things were fairly peaceful. We had to dodge some submarines which were lurking about and continued the quest of locating the enemy until well on into the forenoon when it became apparent that he had eluded us in the mist and gone home.

We were not sorry when we eventually got back to harbour.

as we had been pretty continuously on the go, though I had more chance of rest than the others on the way back.

I have recorded incidents very bluntly and in a matter of fact spirit as they occurred, and from very much the same mental outlook that one is obliged to adopt in order to remain calm and alert and ready for what may come next. The philosophising and honest opinion one may form of the whole thing are underneath, the occasion does not suit for their laying bare in the ordinary round of ship life, more especially at times of pressure.

The officers and men without any exception were splendid and despite all circumstances remained bright and cheery. The good ship will soon be her old self again and none the worse for the knocks.

It is somewhat difficult to estimate whether you are in a position to form a birdseye view of a battle fleet extending 7 or 8 miles with numerous small craft distributed up and down the line. This is as it were the foundation stone. Next you add great wicked looking tongues of flame which appear 4 or 5 at a time in each ship followed immediately by a dense brown fog of cordite smoke which probably eclipses the ship for several seconds. Then comes the most picturesque touch—the tremendous columns of water (thicker at the top than at the base) which rise to a height of about 200 feet as each projectile strikes the water, and finally the dull red glow of shots getting home on the target. The latter effect is considerably altered when the point of view is shifted to the ship that is hit. Probably it then takes the form of a blinding flash and sharp heavy explosion, and from a ship near by looks like the destruction of the ship.

We reach the limit of description or realization when it comes to a ship blowing up. The original vast sheet of flame is immediately succeeded by an apparently slow ascending column of fragments and yellow-grey smoke. The slowness however is only apparent as the top of the column when finally expanded must reach a height of something like 1000 feet.

Noises are in similar proportion. Enemy shell bursting close to the ship have a sharper sound than one's own guns firing, but the passage of large projectiles through the air cause a continuous heavy roaring sound broken up into waves like the passage of an express train and convey a distinct sense of heat.

Fortunately my cabin was quite untouched, but many others were pierced by varying sizes of shell splinters which caused more or less damage. In the office one piece pierced a bunker exhaust pipe with the result that until it was patched yesterday coal dust poured into the place rendering paper work a difficult task.

This is I fear but a brief and very inadequate description of events, but at the times when the points one wants to bring out are most clear in one's mind there is probably no opportunity to put them down, and as you may imagine the atmosphere has not yet settled down. If, however, there are any points you would like to hear more about do write at once and I will do what I can to make them clear. It is extraordinary what a jumbled conception everyone had of what had happened. The only way to form a connected idea is to refer to notes taken at the moment, and my notes are now in great demand by a lot of the officers. They also went forward to the vice admiral as our official record of the proceedings.

---there's as good fish in the river as ever were caught
